

NEW

At CCB, we are always working to develop new product lines that will entice our customers and will capture the design and style trends.

CCB's playing with Fire - "Charred Ash".....

We have pulled our inspiration from:

- Charred wood barrels used for the distilling of whiskey & wine
- "Shou-Sugi-Ban"- a style of fire finishing technique used in Japanese Architecture
- The use of natural materials with a sensitivity to elements & their environment
- Capturing rustic & industrial looks

CCB's "Charred Ash" Solid Wood Table Tops

CCB's Charred Wood Table Tops are made of random plank Solid Ash in a 1.25" thickness. A flame and heat source are applied to the wood tops to create a darkening and burnishing effect that emphasizes the grain of the Ash wood. After this "Charring" process, a high solids catalyzed conversion varnish is applied to protect as well as preserve the transformed look of the wood.

CCB's "Charred Ash" is a light to medium technique that emphasizes and darkens the Natural Grain Patterns while still maintaining the lighter appearance of the solid Ash wood.

There will be some variation on each table top due to the individual wood plank characteristics as well as the charring process which will be applied by hand at CCB.

We hope this will light a "FIRE" in your projects!
